Developing an Environmental Management System

Monday, November 4, 2002

Comfort Inn, Okemos

9am-3pm

Overview: The ISO 14001 Environmental Management System (EMS) focuses on that specific component of an organization's management structure that addresses the immediate and long-term impact of its products, services and processes on the environment. The ISO 14001 standard provides order and consistency in how an organization assigns responsibilities, allocates resources and evaluates practices, procedures and processes that affect the environment.

This one-day workshop will provide an overview of the required 17 elements with the ISO 14001 EMS and discuss how to integrate them into your existing management system. Participants will receive a manual of reference material and course notes.

Speaker Profile: James Pollack, P.E. is an ISO 14001 EMS consultant and trainer for Omni Tech Int'l. Ltd. (Midland, MI) with extensive regulation, legislative, manufacturing and training experience in the environmental field. He has also trained groups in how to conduct life cycle assessments and EHS regulatory reviews of new products and processes during R&D phases. Jim is a past-president of MSPE.
